Mission Ranch plans make progress at county

CLINT EASTWOOD'S proposal to renovate a portion of his Mission Ranch moved cautiously forward this week before Monterey County Supervisors.

During the hearing Tuesday, supervisors unanimously adopted a resolution to approve a land use amendment for the area plan.

The matter will be taken up during the board's April 16 meeting when a negative declaration and rezoning for the project are also scheduled to be considered.

Before final approval, Eastwood's application must be heard before the state Coastal Commission.

'Mission Ranch has been in need of repair for a number of years. Clint's intention was to buy it and preserve it.'

Eastwood's application includes upgrading a portion of Mission Ranch's guest cabins, which would increase from 26 to 31 units, increasing floor space in the restaurant, remodeling or replacing the tennis courts and dedicating almost 13 acres of wetlands to permanent open space.

While the actual agenda item before the board centered upon a necessary amendment to the Carmel Area Land Use Plan, a portion of the hour-long hearing saw Monterey attorney Michael Albov accusing the county of practicing double standards.

Albov said the county is processing Eastwood's application far more expeditiously than the typical citizen's.

"I feel like David up against Goliath," said Albov, who is representing Carmel Point resident Catherine Woodward. "The project itself is driving everything. Does preservation require commercial expansion?"

Indeed, on its face, it would appear that, in some ways, the county may have put the proverbial cart before the horse.

Unless it is appealed, the project will only be heard by the county planning commission, which has already adopted a notice of intent to approve the application.

Despite assurances from Director of Planning and Building Bob Slimmon that it is "not unusual" for the commission to hear a project before amendments are made, at least one supervisor was not happy.

"I'm very disturbed," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman. "It's not appropriate to have a plan amendment and at the same time a project."

Deputy County Counsel Efren Iglesia told the board that he was unwilling to take the blame for any possible indiscretion.

Council reverses self, OKs 45 percent FAR

By SUSAN BECK

THE CARMEL City Council unanimously approved a motion Tuesday to adopt a floor area ratio (FAR) plan they believe will satisfy the will of the voters.

At the April 2 regular monthly meeting the council decided (by a 4-0 vote, with Councilman Ken White absent), that on sites of 4,000 square feet or less in area and with less than a 30-percent slope, the maximum floor area shall not exceed 45 percent of the size of the site.

That action more or less brings to a close a controversial and contentious chapter in the city's history.

In 1990 the council revised the standard for floor area ratio from 45 to 40 percent after considerable debate and public input, but because of a divided council and public outcry the council opted to put the issue before the voters. In March, Carmel voters rejected Measure E, which called for a 40 percent floor area ratio as a permanent part of Carmel's General Plan and Zoning Ordinance.

Mayor Jean Grace said that the FAR plan adopted by the council was the original version presented for Carmel's General Plan when Clint Eastwood was mayor of Carmel. She called it a wise choice.

The FAR plan also states that the maximum allowable floor area for lots with a slope of 30 percent or greater shall be determined through the use permit process.

In addition, calculation of the total floor area for sites larger than 4,000 square feet but less than 12,500 square feet will be formulated by subtracting 45 percent of the number of square feet over 4,000 divided by 1,000.

When asked if the plan did in fact reflect the voters' choice, Grace said, "It's hard to second-guess the voters, but I believe that they were against 40 percent. Maybe now we will be able to put this all to bed."

Not so for Cedric Choi, who is still wrestling with the council's bedcovers. At the council's March meeting, Choi appealed a decision of

'It's hard to second-guess the voters, but I believe that they were against 40 percent. Maybe now we will be able to put this all to bed.'

— Jean Grace

the Carmel Planning Commission to deny a building permit for his three-plex on Mission Street between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

The council continued his appeal until next month because the outside of his proposed building does not reflect the feeling of Carmel.

Reviewing Choi's appeal Grace said that she was not very happy with his project. "It has a larger city look, like a factory. It just doesn't look like Carmel."

Choi defended his Mediterranean-style project by adding that he was not a developer with a city look in mind. "I'm a landowner trying to build a home for me and my wife."

The proposed project will have a home for Choi on the entire top floor with two small condominiums on the lower level. Choi revised his plans to include a 650-square-foot unit, and to change the entire project from 4,000 to 3,600 square feet.

Choi presented the revisions to the council and pointed out that they cost him about $5,000. Choi has been working on his project since 1988, and the design reviews have cost him about $80,000 so far.

Choi said, "Development in Carmel is frustrating, but it's beautiful. Hopefully, we can build something that is acceptable to everyone."

Residents representing the entire block surrounding Choi's proposed project presented the council with several comments in favor of the Mediterranean-style condominium project.

Edgar Daniels from the Chimney Condominiums on Junipero said that he was pleased with Choi's design. "It's modest and will not block the view even on the first floor. Esthetically, it's pleasing to the residents because of the multiple recesses."

"As to whether it's 'Carmel,' I will point out that all the other different buildings fit in rather attractively," said Daniels.

Harriet Daniels, charter member of the Carmel Residents Association (CRA) said that Carmel reflects virtually every architecture of the world. "The project has spirit, beauty, and the design of the home is well thought-out and responds to Carmel."

Council members Barbara Brooks and James Wright asked for a modification of the building's outside facade, "something softer," which Choi said he would rework and present to the council next month.

Despite the delay, Grace and Councilman Bob Fischer both agreed that Choi's efforts to meet their design requests was admirable.

Negative impact

Dear Editor:

As a resident and business owner on the Monterey Peninsula, I feel that should Pebble Beach Golf Course go private, the negative impact will be enormous.

Even allowing partial access to non-members will not satisfy the needs of those who frequented the facilities and stayed on the peninsula spending money in the hotels and shops.

We also fear the potential Hawaiiization of the residential area due to the impact of the sale of private memberships in Japan. Properties can be bought up at inflated prices by non citizens; non-taxpayers who avail themselves of all the benefits of our country without any of the liabilities.

I do not blame the Japanese for taking advantage of the opportunities we offer, but rather our government for allowing this tragedy to occur. The door must be closed or access at least limited.

This subject has aroused a deep sense of bitterness, anguish and concern for all citizens of the Monterey Peninsula. We feel that Pebble Beach is a national treasure and should be enjoyed by all.

Fiscal irresponsibility

Dear Editor:

Our fiscally irresponsible city council has voted unanimously with the encouragement of the city administrator to spend $335,000 to construct a park on a $1 million site for a cost to the city of $1.335 million. This also removes 20 to 30 parking spaces from both public and private use in a city already desperate for parking.

They have so far permitted the cutting of two high canopy trees to make way for the placement of a heritage building of doubtful merit. Even this does not consider the future maintenance cost for a city already with an abundance of parks.

This expenditure is authorized for an additional park while the youth center is left to starve and the library is threatened with a reduction of county funds.

In the meantime, the business community, with no say in the decision is continuously persecuted even though it pays the highest proportion of the taxes.

Absurd project

Dear Editor:

In America we seem to have a democracy. In Carmel, we seem to have a dictatorship. The city's plan to build and maintain another park (Lincoln between Fifth and Sixth), is nothing short of absurd.

We need parking.

As residents of Carmel, we like to shop in Carmel. It is not always feasible or convenient to walk to town.

There are vacant shops and restaurants and other shops barely able to remain open.

Residents in Carmel Valley state they cannot shop in Carmel because parking is too difficult.

People come to Carmel to see the beautiful white sand and ocean, the unusual shops, galleries, and attend good restaurants. They do not come to see parks.

Surely there are other residents who share may feelings.

Please let the mayor, city council, the city administrator, and the CRA be aware that a lot of us dogmatically oppose another park.

Parking dilemma

Dear Editor:

For leadership and financial credibility let us, once again visit parking, the excessively beaten "dead horse." Parking has been an issue for so long that some of the original designers and people involved with the Sunset Center parking garage have passed away!

Hundreds of thousands of dollars paid to the city in the form of in-lieu parking fees have yet to provide a credible solution to the parking dilemma.

We will all remember that the decision to purchase and fund the wetlands was accomplished in one meeting of the city council. Instantaneously we made a commitment of $2 million for the purchase of property we had no reasonable plans for. A $2 million obligation to you the taxpayer for a plan without direction?

In over 20 years we have not been able to make the same commitment to parking, which generates us hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. Is this credible financial leadership?

Most recently, the director of the planning department has been able to direct the planning commission to the two small garage concept, one of which I question as being closer to the outer perimeter boundaries of Carmel. I think the site farthest to the south is closer to Carmel's southern border than to the center of Carmel. This was found to be acceptable and preferable over a larger fully functioning garage, which would only be a couple of blocks from town. Notice that although this has yet to be implemented, we do have the wetlands.

There have been numerous plans submitted for a large parking garage that would alleviate our parking problems. Rather than pursuing these options, city government chose to purchase a wetland park to protect our sphere of influence.

How many of us have found ourselves in need of a place to park in Carmel? Amortized over 30 years $1.75 million equates to payments of approximately $17,000 per month. What benefits could we derive now from $17,000 per month? By the time you add in taxes and insurance, I would venture to guess that this property is costing well over $20,000 per month. What would you do with $20,000 per month. I ask you which should have been addressed first, wetland preservation or alleviation of traffic and parking problems?

Just because the tourists are not here now, it does not mean that when they return we will not be once again inundated with the horrendous traffic and parking problems that we have endured in the past.

What is Carmel style?

Dear Editor:

As a Carmel resident of over 40 years, I wonder if all the fuss about remodeling and rebuilding small, older houses is all that valid.

There are many houses in Carmel that weren't built for year-around living. By today's standard they are inconvenient and unlivable and need to be rebuilt. If someone moves to Carmel and in order to have a place to live, they decide to rebuild one of the old houses, should we condemn them because the only style of home they know is what they came from?

Every part of the country has their own style of architecture. Maybe we should decide what our style is before we condemn them for not fitting in. Architectural styles change over the years — look around — you can almost tell what year a house was built by its style.

I grant you that some houses built in the last few years leave a great deal to be desired in looks, but also they have remained empty. After all, we live in a free enterprise system and the customer has the last word.

The planning commission tries but they are only part of the solution. We need more architects that think in the Carmel perspective instead of the national perspective. That brings me back to the big question "What is the Carmel style?"

Invasion of privacy

Dear Editor:

Conservationists probably think this new four-container system of garbage collection is a great idea. They might change their minds if they had a long uphill drive and had to make four trips, with containers, to the street, instead of one.

Conserving is a virtue. The U.S. Postal Service could conserve gas by stopping the practice of hauling our local mail over to Salinas and back, in order to add class, by having it postmarked with the county seat logo. The City Fathers and Mothers could conserve by refraining from appropriating funds to encourage Outlanders to come here and drink our water.

I am all for conservation. I am a conservative, just ask either of my two friends. However, this new idea of the four-container system goes too far. It is an invasion of privacy.

When you put your private garbage out in the street, in open containers, guess what happens. The neighbors, or even strangers, can visualize your entire lifestyle, by observing the contents of your containers. They are privy to what you eat, drink and read. It's right there for all to see.

If a fellow has Wild Turkey bottles in his glass container instead of Haig Pinch bottles you can get a fix on him. Also, the number of whiskey bottles in his glass container is a clue to his drinking habits.

No self-respecting housewife would put an unwashed bottle in the glass bin. It's like hanging dirty laundry on the line for all to see. Think of the water wasted in washing these bottles. Ever try to wash the inside of a year-old ketchup bottle. That old stuff is like glue. Takes a lot of hot water to get it nice and clean and fit for the glass bin.

If there are a lot of Four Season salad dressing plastic jars in the plastic container you can be sure the wife is lazy and doesn't make her own salad dressing.

Also, by taking a peek at his paper container it is easy to penetrate your neighbors innermost thoughts. Some folks read the Wall Street Journal, others Playboy, some the Conservative Chronicle and of course some even read the Liberal Opinion. Many folks are closet Liberals, but when their copy of The Nation is exposed in their paper bin, they're out of the closet. There is no hiding. Your philosophical soul is exposed in the street for plain viewing.

Then how about the fellow who doesn't have either bottles or papers in his containers? You have to be suspicious about folks who don't either read or drink. What's worse is the chap whose paper bin is empty, but whose bottle bin is full. He drinks but doesn't read?

The old system was much better, you could easily wrap a dozen empty whiskey bottles in the Sunday New York Times, and no one could guess, if you had read it, drunk or sober. Actually, you would have to be drunk to read the whole thing.

Science education a real concern for educators

By DAVID LELAND

Now, MORE than ever, it is important for high school science students to have the advantage of the best laboratory equipment.

That's the advice from Kristen Lindgren, who graduated from Carmel High School in 1984 and has since pursued a scientific career.

"Science education is a real concern," says Lindgren, 25, referring to worries of the national scientific community. "There are fewer numbers of people going into grad school."

Now a doctoral student at Dartmouth College, Lindgren says outdated equipment at Carmel High could possibly deter some students from moving forward with empirical studies.

"It's important that lab surroundings provide a comfortable and encouraging environment," says Lindgren, who lauds the high school's science program. "If things are broken down, you won't have a positive attitude."

Lindgren says she supports Measure A, a school improvement initiative on the June 4 ballot, which would help purchase new equipment for the high school's labs and help renovate the dated facilities.

"If you could get your high school lab on the level of a college general lab it would be pretty impressive," says Lindgren, a lifelong Carmel resident and daughter of James and Joyce Lindgren.

On the peninsula to speak at a science conference on fungal genetics at Asilomar, Lindgren says she is dismayed by the aging facilities at the high school.

"Just walking around the high school it hasn't changed a whole lot," says Lindgren. "I shudder to think what their library looks like."

Lindgren is well qualified to expound on the scientific community, having received a degree in biological sciences at UC Irvine before entering Dartmouth.

She is currently doing research on biological rhythms and biological clocks, which will be used as a tool to analyze human behavior.

Two immediate applications concern regulating doses of cancer medication to a time when malignant cells are dividing and working with manic depressive patients.

"There's some indication that their (manic depressive's) clock is off sync with the rest of the world," says Lindgren, who will complete her doctoral work in about three years.

When attending high school, Lindgren says she planned on becoming a medical doctor.

"There are pluses to being an M.D., but there are things I wouldn't like so much," Lindgren says. "In scientific research you get to ask questions and then figure them out — medicine is not intellectually stimulating."

After receiving her doctoral degree, Lindgren says she will likely do post-doctoral research and, eventually, teach.

If Measure A passes, it seems likely that Lindgren's expertise will be utilized to upgrade the high school's labs, according to Vance Baldwin, assistant CUSD superintendent.

"We'd like to form a team that's involved in the professions, along with the staff in making decisions," he says.

Says Lindgren, "That would be fun."

Benefit dinner for Carmel schools set for April 22

To ASSIST with its campaign for Measure A — the schools improvement initiative on the June 4 ballot — Citizens for Carmel Schools will be holding "Clambake at the Clam Box," a benefit dinner on Monday, April 22 at the Clam Box Restaurant in downtown Carmel.

Fred Crumme, event organizer, said separate seatings are scheduled for 6 and 7:45 p.m. Individual tickets are on sale for $25 per person and are available by calling Carolyn Davi or Kim Spindler at 624-1546. Only 60 tickets will be sold for each seating, according to Crumme.

Although the Clam Box is closed on Mondays, proprietor D'avid Eagle will open the restaurant for the benefit dinner's exclusive use. Eagle said the evening's three-course menu will consist of a choice from five seafood entrees, soup or salad, dessert and wine.

Patricia Condren, Pat Herro, Gary Gray, Hilton Bialek and Frank Pinney — the five-member CUSD board of trustees — will serve as the evening's waiters and waitresses, while Carmel High School students assist them as busepersons.

Measure A is an initiative seeking a parcel tax to generate $880,000 for Carmel Unified School District over a four-year period. The funds would be used for a myriad of capital improvements, including replacing an aging school bus fleet, asbestos removal, re-roofing and painting school buildings and providing up-to-date computer technology for classrooms.

Carmel police officer cleared on charges of illegal traffic stops

By DAVID LELAND

CARMEL POLICE Officer Phil Lunsford was vindicated by a county Municipal Court judge this week for making traffic stops on eight people accused of drunken driving.

The defendants, who all tested above the legal limit (.08) for blood alcohol when stopped, had sought to suppress evidence on grounds that there had been insufficient basis to make the initial traffic stop.

In his four-page decision, Municipal Court Judge Stephen Sillman disagreed.

"The record...does not appear to this court to establish a viable basis for a determination that any particular traffic stop or detention, followed by an arrest for driving under the influence, was based on fabricated, imaginary or illusory grounds," he wrote in his decision.

'We're extremely pleased that Judge Sillman's thoughtfully written decision completely vindicates Phil Lunsford. Phil was simply performing his duties as a sworn police officer.'

If it could have been proved that Lunsford had stopped the defendants without provocation, evidence of drunken driving could have been dismissed as evidence.

"We're extremely pleased that Judge Sillman's thoughtfully written decision completely vindicates Phil Lunsford," said Gary Gray, Lunsford's attorney. "Phil was simply performing his duties as a sworn police officer."

One of the defendants had complained that Lunsford's police reports were based on "fabrications, distortions and exaggerations of alleged facts," according to court records.

The individual cases have now been reassigned to trial courts for further proceedings.

In reaching his decision, Sillman relied on case law, written by retired California Supreme Court Judge Stanley Mosk, which dealt with the "probable cause issue."

Salient points in that decision include that some activity relating to a crime must have taken place or was about to take place; and that the person about to be stopped is involved in that activity.

"The facts must be such as would cause any reasonable police officer in a like position drawing when appropriate on his training and experience, to suspect the same criminal activity and the same involvement by the person in question," wrote Mosk in his 1978 decision.

Court records indicate that one defendant had a blood alcohol level of .22 — at .08 motorists are considered legally intoxicated.

Sillman also took issue with charges that Lunsford had stopped female drivers to harass them.

"The present record does not contain any evidence or discussion of any gender-initiated or gender-based traffic stops," Sillman wrote.

Sillman concluded his brief by writing that most police officers, if confronted with the same situation, would have made similar traffic stops.

"The facts...offered to the court are adequately based on circumstances that would lead the reasonable police officer to initiate, participate and undertake a traffic stop of the vehicle in question," he said.

Carmel police have not completed their internal investigation of Lunsford.

"While we are certainly gratified by the judge's ruling, due to the fact that a personnel matter is involved, we are prevented from making further comment at this time," said Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras.

Breaking ground

TAKING A gold-colored shovel in hand, Rosalee Murphy Gladney, daughter of Carmel's "master builder" M.J. Murphy, broke ground for the restoration of the First Murphy House at Lincoln and Sixth while Carmel Planning Commissioner Brian Congleton looked on. Restoration of the house, which was built in 1902, the first one built by the young Murphy, is just the first step in an ambitious plan that includes the house and an adjoining park. The ground-breaking ceremonies, attended by about 75 people, included speeches from Mayor Jean Grace, Enid Sales (project director), and 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman; coffee and baked goods; a barbershop quartet; and balloons galore. Pesky Pescadero Canyon project nearing approval by planners

By EVE BRITTON

ALTHOUGH THE Parcel 5 Pescadero Canyon project did not win approval, it came closer than it had before and earned a continuance and accolades from Carmel Planning Commission members at the regular March 27 meeting.

And, applicant Chris Tescher has moved closer to approval over the past nine months than the previous applicant, Mary Cone O'Riley had in more than a year of filing, refiling and appeals.

At the meeting, commissioners and city staff members told Tescher he had done well in working with such an environmentally sensitive area.

"In the staff's perspective this is a more sophisticated plan (for a single-family development), than we saw a year ago," said Diane White, city planning director.

Tescher's plans for developing the property involve a sensitivity to the landscape that when presented, had commissioners heads nodding in agreement.

Most of the work on the severely sloping site would be done by hand, Tescher said. "We will be bringing no heavy equipment onto the site," he said, adding that one of his primary concerns on the property is preserving the vegetation.

Commissioners discussed, as they have in past meetings, whether the city would be able to purchase the property located along the north side of Second Avenue.

Commissioners had asked for Carmel City Council assistance in the matter, asking if purchasing the property would be in keeping with the implementation intentions of the General Plan and Local Coastal Plan.

Currently, commissioners were informed, there are no means for purchasing the property and their decision on the application for now had to rely on current city zoning ordinances.

The planning commission's main concerns with the lot is its buildability on its steep slopes, which are all in excess of 30 percent. The site drops from a maximum height of 120 feet to 74 feet (mean sea level).

"I'm grappling with whether or not this is a buildable site," Commissioner Brian Congleton said, shaking his head. "But the approach Tescher's taking is correct."

Commissioners also discussed what was proposed for the other side of the canyon, outside of Carmel city boundaries, and, according to the Monterey County Planning Commission, outside the city's sphere of influence.

Commissioners said they were not sure what sort of development is planned for the other side of the canyon, but suggested that whatever it is, it may have an effect on Tescher's chances for development.

"These are the types of projects we (builders) earn our keep over," a frustrated Tescher said. "Now how can we come up with a design that works for the city and myself?"

Commissioners decided to continue the matter until the commission's April 10 meeting, where they will have a "roundtable" discussion of the design and use permit applications.

"The city and builder have to work together," Tescher said in agreement of the roundtable meeting idea.

In other commission action, design study approval was granted for an application for a second-story addition to an existing residence on the east side of Camino Real between Eighth and Ninth.

Design study approval was granted for a new two-story single-family residence on the south side of 13th between San Antonio and Scenic.

A use permit was granted for an expansion of the Lonesome Dove, a leather goods store located on San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh.

The Vintage Property Management real estate office was granted a use permit for a location in the service-commercial district. The office is located on the westside of San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth.

The Silvey Trust application for a master use permit subdividing commercial space on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth has been continued until the April 10 meeting.

The next regular meeting of the Carmel Planning Commission will be at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 10 in the City Council Chambers at Carmel City Hall, Monte Verde just south of Ocean.

Little Horse Ranch trial will begin on July 22

AFTER TWO years of frustrating negotiations, the alleged land-use violations concerning John Murphy, Jr.'s Little Horse Ranch are scheduled to reach trial in Santa Clara County Superior Court on July 22.

Last fall, a county Superior Court judge ruled that the matter should be moved to San Jose because of "local prejudice" in the news media.

Murphy has been accused of illegally grading 14.5 miles of road on his ranch by the Attorney General's office, district attorney, Monterey County and state Coastal Commission.

The 5,000-acre Little Horse Ranch is located in steep coastal mountains roughly eight miles south of Carmel, east of Highway 1.

Murphy has been accused of allegedly moving 27,400 cubic yards of earth, according to court records.

Since 1988, the plaintiffs have been attempting to force Murphy to perform erosion control work, but his lawyers have successfully argued against any county-sanctioned plan.

The upcoming trial will focus on erosion control, restoration and possible fines, according to Peter Kaufman, deputy attorney general.

"It will be easier to do it in one trial rather than split the issues up," Kaufman said.

Kaufman said he is unsure if the trial will be heard by a judge or jury, but that the proceedings will last about one week.

News notes:

Council dilemma: is it art or is it furniture?

By SUSAN BECK

WHAT MAY look like art to one person may be just a piece of furniture to another.

The art versus furniture dilemma was brought out at Tuesday's city council meeting when Brendon Walter, owner of Walter White, formerly known as a home furnishing shop, appealed a decision of the Carmel Planning Commission, which redesignated his business as, "arts and crafts."

For the past eight years Walter's business, even though advertised as Walter White Fine Arts on the corner of San Carlos and Seventh, has been classified as home furnishings.

In an attempt to move from the current location to the Kaufman-Eastwood building, the planning commission reviewed Walter's business and on Feb. 20, 1991, they found that the appropriate land use classification was arts and crafts.

This is a new classification that was established in 1989 and is not allowed in the Service Commercial Land Use District, where the Kaufman-Eastwood building sits.

Representing Walter, Alan Williams, said that the reclassification does nothing to benefit the city and was a punitive act. He presented a list of items that Walter White offers, explaining that the business sells home furnishings, objects of art and related accessories.

The question before the council was art versus furniture in defining Walter's business. The only true measure of identifying arts and crafts according to the law is a qualification from the American Crafts Guild.

Mayor Jean Grace said, "There's a fuzzy line between arts and crafts and home furnishings. I feel very strongly that we need to error on the side of reasonableness."

Several residents voiced their opinion as to art versus miscellaneous home furnishings, but the final word came from Grace, who said that the planning commission's classification was "weird" and did not accommodate the possibility of having art furniture in a store.

"Not all furniture has to come from Macy's," she said.

Council Member Barbara Brooks was against changing the classification for one business. She suggested that the planning commission refine their definitions and deal with all businesses as a whole.

Grace said, "What's the harm in changing Walter White to home furnishings. The planning commission will have to deal with everyone one-on-one too."

The council reversed the planning commission's classification of Walter White back to home furnishings with conditions that some obvious art pieces be placed in another shop entirely and some not so obvious art pieces be called "accessories."

Fate of moratorium rests with district's advisory committee

By FRANK GEORGE

AS THE peninsula water board prepares to ease rationing by half, the recently enacted ban on water permits may be the next thing to go down the drain.

At present, though, the fate of the controversial moratorium rests in the hands of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's Technical Advisory Committee (TAC).

The meeting will be held at 9 a.m. Thursday, April 11, at the district conference room, 187 El Dorado St. in Monterey. The meeting is open to the public.

"Right now, it's a jump ball amongst (peninsula) cities for who gets what portion of the water," said Michael Ricker, district water demand division manager.

The eight-member TAC group consists of planners from six cities, the county health department and the Monterey Peninsula Airport. Each member is eager to barter for a larger piece of the Seaside Peralta Well's 1,000-acre-foot pie.

"The formula that the TAC has been working on would be 308 acre feet divided among eight jurisdictions," said Brian Roseth, an associate planner from Carmel who sits on the committee. "So it's not going to be a lot of water, but it's more than we have now."

The moratorium on new permits was effective

Jan. 1. The board had ruled the ban should be lifted when a new water source becomes available.

Nevertheless, a 238-acre-foot deficit on the peninsula water supply must first be made up by the new source. Then, half the water would go to drought reserve. That would leave either 308-, 381- or 262-acre-feet to be allotted for development, depending on how they divide it.

Board chairman Dale Hekhuis, who lives in Carmel, said the 381-acre-foot allotment should go to new permits. However, no new water would be available until June or July, he said.

Some time after the meeting, the TAC will make its recommendations to the Policy Advisory Committee (PAC) — a group of elected officials from within the district.

In turn, the PAC will meet and compare notes on TAC choices. It will then present consolidated recommendations to the board.

Jim Cofer, district general manager, said the directors will probably vote on the moratorium-defeating ordinance by the May 27 meeting.

Acceptance key to aging problem say local authors of new book

By DAVID LELAND

DESPITE THE aging process being a universal one, two local health-care professionals have found it quite difficult to find a responsive public.

Couple many people's fear of death with the prospect of suffering illness in a nursing home during old age, and the audience continues to dwindle.

"People don't want to deal with this issue," says Margarite Alvarez, who co-owns Country Home Care at the mouth of the valley with registered nurse Judy Higerson.

Country Home Care administers in-home patient care, with patients receiving assistance from a few days a week to 24 hours a day.

The duo was unaware just how taboo the subject was until they attempted to find a publisher for their newly released book, Hidden Shame: The Shocking Story of America's Elderly Ill.

The general consensus among publishers, they found, was that the material was "too down" — somehow they needed to make it more uplifting.

Alvarez and Higerson stuck to their beliefs that the truth in America's care of its elderly be known, and eventually landed a deal with New York-based Vantage Press, Inc.

To be sure, many of the stories portrayed in the 146-page book are heart-rending, but there is a constructive purpose to the manuscript.

Hidden Shame offers a thoroughly realistic appraisal of current prospects for older Americans, says Alvarez.

"We want to begin to have people think about alternative options to nursing homes," says Alvarez, who formed Country Home Care with Higerson eight years ago. "They are places where people go to die. Instead of getting better, they (patients) get worse."

Indeed, the duo's book echoes recent federal and state findings which show that as many as 80,000 elderly people are suffering abuse in nursing homes on any given day.

MARGARITE ALVAREZ

JUDY HIGGERSON

JUDY HIGGERSON and Margarite Alvarez have written a book Hidden Shame: The Shocking Story of America's Elderly Ill that recounts the often-harsh treatment seniors receive in nursing homes.

Alvarez adds that the average stay for an elderly person, once they are committed to a nursing home, is two years.

In their book, Alvarez and Higerson documented actual cases culled from local case histories of patients suffering the indignities of aging.

As is demonstrated in the book, many caregivers are well meaning, but fail to take into account the welfare of their loved ones.

"The problem isn't about intentional abuse; it's about unintentional abuse," says Alvarez, referring to financial, emotional and psychological problems. "The book is about how to avoid abuse."

ALVAREZ AND Higerson add that people need to take action regarding their old age health care before it is too late.

"People think they will roll over in their sleep and die," says Alvarez, adding that, in some respects, terminally ill patients are dealt a better hand than those languishing in nursing homes year after year.

People must be specific in their wants and needs.

"If they want alternative options, they have to plan ahead," says Alvarez. "If not, they will be shuffled off to a nursing home."

Higerson says that, as people age, it is wise to relinquish a little of their personal power.

"Accepting a certain amount of dependence is healthy; it's part of the aging process," she says. "It's like preventative health care."

Alvarez and Higerson are painfully aware that statistics bear out the fact that America's population is indeed aging.

By the year 2025, they say, there will be 65 million people over age 65, the fastest growing segment of the nation's population.

Moreover, rapidly increasing hospital and nursing home costs, combined with the state and federal incentives for hospitals to send patients home sooner, has forced older patients home from medical treatment much sooner than in the past.

The result: elderly ill and their families often face financial, physical and emotional ruin.

"We want to begin to have people think about alternative options to nursing homes. They are places where people go to die. Instead of getting better, they (patients) get worse."

— Margarite Alvarez

Alvarez and Higerson demonstrate in their book that awareness and education can prevent problems from growing worse.

"The problem with the system is not that there isn't enough money, it's how it's being spent," says Alvarez, adding that it is actually cheaper to care for a person in their home than in a nursing facility.

Unfortunately, only limited federal and state money is available for home-health care, she says.

Alvarez and Higerson are currently lobbying politicians to adopt laws that will best serve the ever-increasing elderly population.

The duo, which is donating 10 percent of the book's sales to Alliance on Aging, is undaunted by low sales at Thunderbird Books, the only local outlet to purchase Hidden Shame.

"People who are reading the book are handing it on to their best friends and kids," says Higerson, who adds they have put $40,000 into the book during the past six years. "That's what our hopes and dreams are with the book."

Council OKs 45 percent FAR

Grace said, "I'm not crazy about the design, but what the heck. Your neighbors have convinced me. I'm not sure as a council we are particularly adept at redesigning someone else's residence."

Fischer said that it would be unfair for him to say no to the project just because he didn't like it. "After two and a half years, it shouldn't be denied any longer. We have to be fair."

While some property owners are trying to design new homes that look in character with Carmel, others want to demolish the old existing homes that are Carmel.

Carmel resident Roger Hudson submitted a petition with numerous signatures of appeal to the planning commission to reconsider the demolition of a residence at Dolores and Santa Lucia streets.

The owner of the property, San Piffero, said that remodeling the old structure is prohibitive, and wants to rebuild two new buildings on his two lots.

Hudson said that the new buildings would severely restrict his view, and he objected to tearing down a beautiful old residence to replace it with two smaller ones on the same block. He said that it would not be in keeping with the neighborhood.

Grace pointed out that Hudson had complained another time about a new residence next to his home that he said infringed on his property.

Grace asked, "Is it possible that you just want to keep everything the same?"

Hudson replied that he bought his home because of the spacious lots in the neighborhood, and it had a view. "I have a right to challenge the council to keep it."

Legally, replacing the existing building with low-cost housing is the only exception that allows the council to overrule the planning commission's decision to let Piffero demolish his home.

Fischer said, "Legally, we can't deny the demolition. I sympathize with Hudson, and with his neighbors who have rights too. What's good for him is good for everyone."

Brooks asked if everyone did indeed have similar rights. "I believe there is a community consensus about demolitions of homes. We have no policy restrictions, and somewhere council has to revisit the issue."

She said that the Dolores and Santa Lucia area is a neighborhood of large lots, no doubt about that. However, there is a place for large homes on large lots stated in the city's general plan to keep in conformity.

"I don't blame Hudson for not wanting a lot of houses around him, no one does," said Grace. "Also, a lot of the petition signers are good friends of mine, but we can't govern on sentiment or emotion. I'm sorry, I understand the sentiments, but I cannot uphold the appeal."

Council continued with considerable debate on an appeal of a decision of the planning commission to reclassifying a business, Walter White's, as "arts and crafts." (See separate story in this issue.)

Also, the consideration of an ordinance amending Title 17 of the Municipal Code by establishing a process for a review of subordinate units in the residential district was held over until next month's meeting.

At the close of the meeting, the council approved amending the ordinance for the Village Preservation Overlay District and adopting a Negative Declaration.

The next meeting of the Carmel City Council will be at 4 p.m. Tuesday, May 7 at the Carmel City Hall's City Council Chambers.

City parking permits still available

THE CITY of Carmel-by-the-Sea Resident Parking Permits for Carmel residents and residential property owners are available at the Carmel police station.

The permits, which are good for the calendar year 1991, authorize holders extended parking ONLY in the following time zones:

1. Two hours in parking spaces designated for one hour.
2. Sixty minutes in parking spaces designated for 30 minutes.
3. In residential areas designated preferential resident parking.
4. Parking on Scenic Road after sunset.

In order to receive a permit, you must meet the following criteria:

1. Be the registered owner of the vehicle.
2. Be a resident or own residential property within the city limits of Carmel.
3. Bring some type of proof indicating you are a resident or own residential property within the city limits.
4. Pay $4 for the permit.

Coast Ranch moves ahead in planning process

THE MONTEREY County Planning Commission last week gave preliminary approval to Coast Ranch, a proposed 76-lot subdivision south of Carmel east of Highway 1.

After a three-hour hearing, commissioners, in a 5-3 vote (Orrett, Evans, Stallard dissenting), approved a resolution of intent to approve the project when conditions are presented at their April 24 hearing.

The proposed project includes a 76-unit subdivision and renovation of six red farm-labor cabins. In addition, 36 acres will be dedicated to open space and 52 acres will remain in artichoke production.

The March 27 meeting culminated a long-running battle between the county planning department and water resources district.

Planners have argued that Coast Ranch would cumulatively produce significant amounts of traffic on the already busy Highway 1. However, the water resources agency officials successfully argued that flood control outweighs possible traffic impacts.

The Odello family, which has filed the application for Coast Ranch, has an agreement to allow the levee on the south bank of the Carmel River to be lowered to flood a portion of their property. Once the levee is lowered, shopping and residential development on the north side of the Carmel River would be safe from flooding.

"If I lived in Mission Fields or had a shop in The Crossroads I would be concerned (about flooding)," said Bruna Odello, after the hearing. "I see that people in the area are taking an interest in the potential flood situation and are beginning to take a stand."

Residents and commercial interests alike have mounted a petition drive urging the county to initiate flood control at the mouth of the valley.

Those signing the petition argue that approving Coast Ranch is the only financially practical way of ensuring use of the Odello land.

Mission Ranch plans go forward said. "I did advise the planning commission against hearing the permit."

However, 1st District Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck said such talk was inappropriate.

"The celebrity status of the applicant has gotten in the way of the hearing's focus on land use," she said. "It's (Mission Ranch) a modest attempt to keep the property the way it was intended to be in the Coastal Act."

AND WHILE Strasser Kauffman may have agreed with Albov that preferential treatment may have been given, she indicated support for the project.

"Some modest expansion is tolerable in that area," she said, adding that traffic and noise must be addressed before she will give full support to the application.

Supervisors directed the planning staff to provide them with a list of conditions that have been adopted by the planning commission.

Architect Alan Williams, who represented Eastwood at the hearing, told the board that the project, in addition to exceeding wetland requirements set up by the U.S. Army Corp of Engineers, has received the blessing of nearby neighbors.

"Mission Ranch has been in need of repair for a number of years," Williams said. "Clint's intention was to buy it and preserve it."

Williams said it is impossible to work further trying to repair the deteriorating buildings.

Elizabeth Bell, chairperson of Concerned Neighbors of Mission Ranch, agreed that it is high time to spruce up the facilities.

"We're embarrassed when we put friends (up) there," said Bell, who has lived across the street from the ranch for 30 years.

Williams said that, after renovation, Mission Ranch will exceed 10-percent water savings requirements by "three or fourfold." That, he said, will be accomplished by removal of nine kitchens from existing cottages and by drawing non-potable water from a well to irrigate drought-resistant plants.

In addition to neighbor support, Williams cited project approval from the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, Carmel Residents Association, Carmel Heritage and Monterey County History Society.

Those living near the ranch, however, stopped short of asking supervisors to delete any possibility of residential structures on the property. Under the current amendment, as many as four homes could be built on each acre of Mission Ranch.

Strasser Kauffman said she was surprised that locals were not addressing that potential problem.

"I prefer to see residential use deleted," she said. "(But) I'm willing to bow to the neighbors if they are willing to fight some battles down the road."

Coastal Commission questions PB Co.'s golf course plans

IN A letter written to Pebble Beach Co. President Tom Oliver, the state Coastal Commission said plans for selling golf course memberships will come under close scrutiny.

Last month it was revealed that the Pebble Beach Co. was considering selling limited private memberships to its golf course to cover costs of the luxurious resort.

The Coastal Commission is now taking a wait-and-see attitude.

"It is our position that the change in use of any of the golf courses within the Del Monte Forest from general public use to private membership use requires review under the California Coastal Act either by coastal permit from the county or from the Commission on appeal, or by way of amendment to the LCP," wrote Peter Douglas, executive director.

Douglas added that the Coastal Act defines new development as a change in land or water use or public access.

"Clearly, what is being proposed here will result in such a change," he wrote.

The letter pointed out that the Coastal Commission approved the Del Monte Forest segment of the county Land Use Plan with the understanding the golf courses would be accessible to the general public.

The commission did, however, allow a portion of Spanish Bay and Poppy Hills to be dedicated to private membership.

Douglas stopped short of scuttling plans for any private membership in Pebble Beach.

"All this is not to say that conversion of the status of use to some form of private membership condition cannot be found to be consistent with the Coastal Act policies," Douglas wrote. "The point is that such a change must be reviewed against the Coastal Act requirements."

At their March 19 meeting, supervisors said they would take up the Pebble Beach Co.'s proposal in 45 days.

DORIS DAY'S BEST FRIENDS

By Doris Day

Happy endings Buffy & Toby: Twice lucky!

EACH TIME we place one of our orphans, we thoroughly check the family and home to be certain they will provide a safe, nurturing and loving environment for their new pet. I must admit, our standards are very high and we don't go forward with the placement if there is any doubt in our minds about the quality of the new home.

Although we feel that all of our placements are terrific, every once in awhile a truly special connection is made. That was the case with Dale Williams, owner of Gepetto's at The Crossroads, and a delightful cocker spaniel named Toby.

Dale had lost his beloved cocker spaniel to old age and was devastated. Since he loved the breed so much, he hoped to find another. When he met Toby it was love at first sight and we were delighted to have found such a wonderful new home for our sweet boy. Not only is he a perfect doggy, but he's positively gorgeous.

We soon learned that Dale's brother, Dennis, was so taken by Toby that he wanted to adopt a dog of his own. It just so happened we were fostering another cocker spaniel named Buffy with Milt and Sally Williams (no relation), so we arranged a meeting and got lucky a second time!

Dennis adored Buffy, and Buffy was crazy about his new brother, Toby — so Buffy and Toby Williams are now enjoying the good life with their new "dads." Another happy ending that we enjoy sharing with all of you!

HELPFUL HINTS

Dr. Ray Foster of the Mid Valley Animal Hospital has shared two great health care tips that I want to pass on to you:

Our recent rainstorms have made our lawns and gardens green again, but have you noticed any strange plants sprouting around the base of your trees or on your lawns? The moisture in the ground can create the right conditions for various types of fungus to grow and they are extremely toxic to your dog or cat. Don't wait another minute — do a yard check and pull out any suspicious-looking plants or mushrooms.

Our other tip involves what Dr. Foster calls "stool supervision." Many pet owners simply clean up and dispose of their pet's stool without paying much attention to it, but in fact you should check the stool at least once a week. If you see any abnormalities (like blood or tapeworms), or chronic problems (like diarrhea), you should report this to your veterinarian immediately.

Dr. Foster also says that many people have a fairly tall ground cover where dogs love to go potty and that does present a problem. Most often you can't find what they have done, so our solution is to take your go for a walk on a leash every few days so you can carefully check the stool. Oh — by the way, your pet's annual exam should include a stool check so be sure to take a fresh sample in a non-see-through (!) plastic bag. Not too thrilling, but very important!

Now to the puppies and kitteris. These little critters are especially curious and may ingest objects that are harmful. You may be surprised by what you see in their stools so be sure to check. And — keep object so that can be swallowed out of their reach. Bye now, see you next time.

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles.)

SPCA needs towels, linens

A plea to the general public is being made by the SPCA of Monterey County for clean towels, sheets, blankets and pillowcases for use in the animal shelter and wildlife center.

Blankets are used as comforters for the many puppies who are brought to the shelter because no one wants them. Prior to their being adopted, the shelter staff tries to make them as comfortable as possible and using blankets helps.

The greatest demand is for clean towels both in the shelter and in the wildlife center.

Donated items can be delivered to the SPCA animal shelter, 1002 Monterey-Salinas Highway 68 (across from Laguna Seca Recreation Area) any day of the week between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. If the donor has a significant quantity and cannot deliver them to the shelter, arrangements can be made to pick them up.

YOUTH NOTES By Pat Lenz

When worlds collapse

AN ALIEN spacecraft landed in downtown Carmel the other day. The locals didn't pay much attention to it, they probably thought they were just some strange tourists, and the tourists probably thought they were strange locals. We at the paper were able to obtain an exclusive interview, after the aliens turned down an interview with the National Inquirer.

The aliens look quite similar to human teenagers. They were wearing what appeared to be cut-off jeans and T-shirts that said, "My Parents Went To Venus and all I Got Was This Lousy T-Shirt."

Pine Cone: Could you start off and tell us why you are here and where you come from?

Aliens: We come from the second galaxy on the right past your Milky Way, or was it the left, we're not quite sure. It doesn't matter we can't go back anyway. We were forced to steal a ship and sneak off our planet before we were exterminated.

Pine Cone: Why were you being exterminated?

Aliens: Because of our age, see, our leaders years ago, decided that anyone under the age of 40 wasn't important to society so they began a process of elimination of young people. First, they started eliminating recreational activities for young people, in the schools and outside the schools. So, young people were left with not much to do, they ended up staring at video screens all day or roaming the streets getting into trouble.

Then the leaders started cutting funds to the schools. Teachers were eliminated and classes got larger and students had a harder time getting an education. Everything that was eliminated was eliminated due to a shortage of funds.

Pine Cone: Didn't the parents try to fight the leaders and do something to help the young people?

Aliens: The parents tried to open centers to give the young people something to do. But the leaders got involved in the centers and undermined what they were trying to do. The parents didn't have the power or the funds to fight the leaders and soon the leaders took over control of the center and closed them down.

Pine Cone: Couldn't any of the people fight the leaders?

Aliens: Well you won't believe this, but the people with the money decided that it would be better if their money went to fix up old houses that no one could live in. Or they gave their money to help our domestic animals instead of trying to help our young people. I know all of this is hard for you to believe but it actually happened on our planet.

Pine Cone: What has become of your planet?

Aliens: It is virtually dead, anyone under 40 has left the planet to go to other planets. The planet started becoming desolate, the streets and buildings became empty. What people were left were old and shriveled up, there was no life left in them. We got out just in time.

Pine Cone: Do you plan to stay here?

Aliens: No, we were just passing through the solar system when our pilot said your planet seemed familiar to him. He said it was like deja vu all over again. You should come to our ship and meet him.

We walked back to their space ship; stopping on the way to buy T-shirts. Then they had me take their picture in front of the Hog's Breath and we got a bite to eat at Chutneys.

When we got back to their ship it was covered with parking tickets. I peeked inside to say "hi" to the pilot, he was wearing a tight sequined jump suit and blue suede shoes. I swear I heard someone singing Jailhouse Rock as the ship took off...Nah it couldn't be.

The book of the month is a must read for parents. The book is titled Childhood's Future by Richard Louv. He traveled all over the country talking to parents and children discussing their hopes and fears, check it out.

CARMEL VALLEY resident Lorraine Arredondo was hostess for her seventh annual Easter yard party and barbecue on Easter Sunday. The Easter Bunny, wearing his sunglasses (it's sunny out in the valley), was on hand for the egg hunt. Festivities also included pony rides for the kids, volleyball and horseshoes. A great afternoon of food and fun was had by all. (Laura Hamilton photo.)

CARMEL... AS I SEE IT

By Betty Barron

The train ride... a weekend away

IT ALL began in 1971 with a KQED auction won by Ted Huntington of Pebble Beach, who bid on a train ride from Jamestown to the Mother Lode country. Since the entire train was at his disposal, he invited 66 adults, 11 teenagers and 11 children, including his own family — wife Lucille, and sons Tom, Grant and Christopher. Some of the guests had never ridden on a train, especially an old narrow-gauge such as the Sierra Railroad Co.'s original gold country train.

But, this day-long trip was an instant success, spiked with real life drama. Midway on the ride the train suddenly came to a stop. All the passengers peered out into a wilderness of mountains and trees, wondering what had happened. Suddenly, a band of train robbers, faces covered with bandanas, burst through the doors yelling "Hold up!" They demanded that the women surrender their jewelry, the men their wallets. Everyone complied and the robbers jumped off and disappeared.

Actually, a small contingent of Train Riders had plotted the escapade, and the wallets and jewelry were subsequently returned to their rightful owners.

Now, in its 19th year, this weekend away "escape" is simply called "The Train Ride." Invitations of homemade design with a replica of an engine spouting smoke and the words "Toot! Toot!" are sent out well in advance. Response is almost 100 percent and each year up to 100 people have put The Train Ride on their calendars as a "must."

Ted Huntington's love of trains began when he was a small boy listening to his father Howard Huntington tell of days long ago. Days when Ted's uncle Collis Huntington was one of the "Big Four" in California with Leland Stanford, Charles Crocker and Mark Hopkins. These four men built the Central Pacific Railroad from Sacramento to its meeting with the Union Pacific Railroad at Promontory, Utah. The famous Golden Spike was driven in 1869, completing the first transcontinental railroad.

Collis Huntington, who also was the founder of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad in 1881, and later the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. in Virginia, was the last of the "Big Four" to survive. He died in 1900 at his camp, Pine Knot, in the Adirondack Mountains of New York.

Ted Huntington and his family moved to Pebble Beach in 1958 from Southern California. He died in 1978. His train ride survives him.

Since 1971 The Train Ride has returned six times to the Sierra Railroad, overnighing in Sonora at the famous Gunn House where guests have devised their own stage shows, creating costumes of great originality and complexity, and songs as yet unpublished. These shows are under the direction of Lucille Huntington, who, with her sister Lois, were the first Toni Twins of "which one has the Toni?" fame.

Lucille came out to Hollywood from New York after a 7-year contract in the production Something for the Boys, which starred Ethel Merman, and was under contract to 20th Century Fox for several years. She appeared in Dream with Music with Vera Zorina and George Ballantine, and in Billy Rose's Seven Lively Arts.

After Ted's death, Lucille who now lives in Carmel, enlisted the help of her sons (who take their families along), Grant and Karen Huntington with Amber, Brian and Paul; Tom and Donna Huntington with Matthew and Claire, and Chris Huntington, all of Carmel. Many times some of their young friends are invited, too. It's really a family affair.

Other locales of the ride have been in the Santa Cruz Mountains...the delightful little open train chugging through the giant redwoods at twilight, ending with a barbecue at Roaring Camp...and, in Mendocino, the super skunk train from Willits to North Spur one year, and later, in 1982, from Ft. Bragg to Willits.

The method of arrival for The Train Ride varies. A full busload of Riders have enjoyed a scenic trip up the central coast, through San Francisco, over the Golden Gate Bridge, and along the Mendocino Coast before boarding the train the following day. Two train rides have begun with a bus from Monterey to Oakland, then Amtrak to Reno to board the little narrow gauge train in Virginia City. The trek to Sonora is usually via a fleet of private cars from Monterey to the rendezvous at Gunn House.

Cottage Grove, Oregon has been the farthest away of all The Train Rides. The Cascade Blue Goose train carried a full complement of peninsulans in 1980.

This year The Train Ride began in Napa on a beautiful autumn day, the vineyards at their loveliest, the sky a pageant of white clouds on brilliant blue. After wining and dining at our hotel, Embassy Suites, the preceding day and night, and applauding the spontaneous "show" of peninsula talent, we all boarded the Wine Train as dusk descended on the hillsides. As we steamed slowly northward through the amber and gold of the sunset caressing the grapevines, we were served a gourmet dinner with the finest of local wines.

For the 20th anniversary of The Train Ride (1991), plans are underway to go still farther for the ride. The Jack Doughertys, who now live in Port Ludlow, Wash., have been investigating train rides in their area.

But, most recently Lucille has been informed of another train ride held in Ashland, KY by the C.P. Huntington Railroad Historical Society. This 18,000-ton coal train was saved from the scrap heap and restored in 1963. It is said to be the largest and most powerful train of its kind in the country, and presents a challenge to our local Train Riders.

So, perhaps the Riders in 1991 will fly first and then chug along later in a vintage train in Kentucky.

By Barbara March

Love can build a bridge

THE MORNING TV news droned in the background. Barbara Bush was receiving an honorary degree. No one in my house paid too much attention as the mother of the U.S., wearing a black and blue scholastic gown, approached the podium of an eastern college to speak to the graduating class of soon-to-be executives. But her opening remarks made us stop to listen.

This is a paraphrase; it was too early in the morning for the mind to record an exact quote, but the message is true. The graduates blinked as Barbara said: "The time it takes to make one more phone call or seal the last business deal will fade as will the details of your telephone conference calls and corporate coups, but you'll always remember the precious time you spend with your family. Don't ever forget to take a moment with your parents, husband or wife, your children." A simple message, but all too often overlooked.

A FAMILY CIRCLE

Grace Meredith and Sam Colburn hadn't planned a grand finale for their joint exhibition at the Pacific Grove Art Center but the wedding reception held in the David Henry Gill Gallery for Vince Bradley and local well-known artist Anita Benson ended their show with a bang.

It was a traditional wedding. The groom and his men wore tuxedos, the bride and her attendants chose long, old-fashioned gowns and the groom played bongos for the limbo dancing. Sounds typical. Colburn, Meredith and silk painter Sherard Russell provided the backdrop for the romantic art-happening.

Sherard's original paintings on silk gave a festive, springtime feel to the Elmarie Dyke gallery as the bride and groom cut the wedding cake, champagne-toasted each other, their children and friends, and threw garters and bouquets to the guests, who, in turn, cheered and smashed a few champagne glasses. The bride's son Ryan brought a tear to everyone's eye as he proposed a toast to Vince, thanking the MPC Dean of Instruction for taking the place of the father Ryan had lost at a young age.

All the arts on the peninsula were represented and everyone knew everyone. There was no need to ask if you were a friend of the groom or the bride. Susan Collins caught the bride's bouquet and Eldon Dedini congratulated the newlyweds.

Two new shows will be opening at the Art Center Friday, April 5. The annual "Patron's Show," a chance to bid on an original piece by your favorite local artist, will be on display for 10 days, climaxing with an auction on April 14. Simultaneously, the "War Show," featuring artistic statements on war by 60 artists will be on exhibit from April 5 to April 14. Call the Pacific Grove Art Center for more information at 375-2208.

I FOUND A PINK ONE!

Neil Simon could have had Sam and Karas in mind when he wrote Last of the Red Hot Lovers. The animated husband-and-wife team performed an excerpt from the last scene of the sophisticated comedy for those attending the "Old Fashioned Adult Easter Egg Hunt" at Los Laureles Lodge on Easter weekend. To see the entire production, plan to attend opening night April 5. Proceeds will benefit the Medical Center of Monterey County.

Sam and Edie joined a throng of Forest Theater supporters for an afternoon of fun that included an Easter bonnet contest (won by Perry Royster for a hat decorated with chicks and eggs), and the traditional hunt. Forest Theater Guild members dressed for the occasion and had fun playing Easter bunny. Los Laureles General Manager Dirk Oldenburg and his staff should watch their step for the next few days. The Easter bunny always forgets where he/she has hidden a couple of eggs.

SOROPTIMIST LUNCH

The sisterhood of optimists, or Soroptimists, held their "Services Awards Luncheon" recently. Throughout the year Soroptimists donate their time at peninsula events such as the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am, Squid Festival, Octoberfest and Monterey County Fair. Marsha Renney, chairperson of service awards for Soroptimist of Carmel Bay awarded checks raised through this past year's hard work to organizations serving women and youth.

Duayne Ostergard accepted a check from Renney for the Easter Seal Society of the Monterey Bay Region, Dennis LaBarbera and Claire Mounter received funds for the Monterey Rape Crisis Center, LifeSavers were represented by founder Vel Garrity and Director Joan Stone, Valerie Makarovsky accepted for Legal Services for Seniors, Mary Lou Catania thanked the Soroptimists for the American Cancer Society of Monterey and San Benito Counties, Lani Fremier's Santa's Peninsula Helpers were gifted as was Mariposa Hall, represented by Rose Simmons.

Soroptimist's fund-raising social event of the year, the "Black and White Ball" will be held Saturday, April 13 at the Monterey Sheraton. Tickets for the evening, which includes dinner, dancing, a silent auction and the crowning of Miss Laguna Seca Raceway Queen are $75 per person. Call 375-5696 for reservations.

HIDDEN SHAME

Nurse Judi Higginson lived it, Margarite Alvarez conceived it

JUDY HIGGINSON and Denise Styles were "in their Easter bonnets" and bows, ruffles and lace at the Forest Theater Guild's "Adult Easter Egg Hunt." (Chris Hulse photo.)

and David McIntyre ghosted it. Hidden Shame, the product of what Higginson refers to as "a three-year pregnancy" is a book about America's elderly ill. This little book is an easy read with a grim message.

How do you plan to spend the final years of your life? Restrained and drugged in a rest home or functioning in your community? Hidden Shame offers a sensitive, compassionate, but thoroughly realistic appraisal of current prospects for older Americans. Today's elderly live longer than ever, but often a diminished quality of life is their trade-off for longevity. Forced to rely on professionals such as bank trust officers and accountants to caretaker estates, the health care needs of the elderly are often subjugated in favor of the financial longevity of the balance sheet.

Higerson and Alvarez, who operate an in-home care nursing service for the rapidly growing elderly population, deliver a strong message. Plan for your elderly parents and yourself. Look long-term and envision how you would like to see yourself living 20, 30, 40 years from now. Investigate alternatives for elderly living and support legislation aimed at reducing the financial burden of elderly health care. Hidden Shame suggests seeking out organizations such as the Alliance on Aging to provide more information.

PEEPS

A hearty laugh greeted a Pagrovia who was perusing the Easter cards in the Hallmark shop on Lighthouse Avenue last week. She thought to herself, "That throaty guffaw could only belong to one person." Peeking around the corner of the anniversary section, she saw woman-about-town Elaine Giampetro standing in front of the humorous birthday section, "just looking thank you," unabashedly having a good time by herself.

WEDDING guests Sam Colburn and Grace Meredith held hands as Father Charlie Moore pronounced Vince Bradley and Anita Benson husband and wife during a romantic ceremony held at Lover's Point in Pacific Grove. Just a few feet away a group of young Chinese exchange students were tossing a frisbee.

NEWS clip from Our Daily: "Highlands Inn, Carmel's magnificent ocean-front hotel, four miles south of Carmel on scenic Highway 1. Superb dining in the fabulous Lochinvar Room." The Lochinvar Room? Well, OK, so the item is from a 1968 edition.

SCREENWRITER Burt Prelutsky has made good his threat to return to the peninsula. Prelutsky, who lived in Carmel in the early '80s, will be a panelist at the National Writers Union writer's retreat to be held May 18 at Holman Ranch in Carmel Valley. Now a resident of La La Land, Burt's still writing for TV and has Family Ties, Newhart and a made-for-TV movie, A Winner never quits starring Keith Carradine to his credit.

PORTOFINO proprietess Barbara Murphy is talking expansion. Barbara's support of the arts on the peninsula has resulted in SRO crowds at weekly poetry readings, musical and theatrical performances. Her Pacific Grove coffee house is suffering growing pains and Barbara can't decide which wall to knock down to make room for more badly needed gallery, seating and performance space.

Play a few sets and you might win a weekend at La Quinta in Palm Springs, tennis or golf at Carmel Valley Ranch, Carmel Valley Racquet Club or Quail Lodge or dinner at one of several peninsula restaurants. Call 373-4421 to reserve your court.

THE BERRIES ARE COMING

The new fund-raising committee for the Community Chapel in Carmel Valley moved into action as soon as the rains stopped and put on an Easter bake sale in front of the Iron Kettle in Carmel Valley Village.

Don't feel bad if you missed it. The Easter goodies were a warm-up for the Community Chapel's big fund-raiser, the annual strawberry-eating marathon scheduled for a second week in June. Publicized as "everything strawberry imaginable, with the calories taken out," this year's event will be bigger and better than ever. The committee is bursting with energy after a month of stay-at-home rainy weather and plan games for the kids, a silent auction, farmers market, craft and plant sale, pie-eating contest and more strawberries than you can imagine. For details call 659-2278.

MONTEREY COUNTY LIBRARIES BEGIN FINE-FREE MONTH

The Monterey County Free Libraries has declared the month of April as Fine-Free Month. According to County Librarian Dallas Shaffer, "the county library has very limited funds to purchase books, so each one that is not returned is a loss to all users of our library branches."

Patrons returning materials checked out from any county library branch will not be charged overdue fines during April. Overdue materials can be turned in at any of the 16 branches and bookmobile of the county library system.

"Each book sitting in someone's home or car instead of being returned to the library limits the library's ability to provide information that people need. Many books are irreplaceable because they are out of print. Even the least expensive item costs over $20 to replace when staff time is taken into consideration," Shaffer reported.

Libraries in the following communities are participating in the Fine-Free Month program: Aromas, Big Sur, Bradley, Carmel Valley, Castroville, Gonzales, Greenfield, and King City. Also, Marina, Pajaro, Parkfield, Prunedale, San Ardo, San Lucas, Seaside, and Soledad. Library materials can also be returned at any of the 25 stops made by the county's bookmobile.

APPLICATIONS AVAILABLE FOR JIM BARRETT MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP

Applications are now available through the Mid Carmel Valley Fire District for an educational scholarship in the amount of $500 for the school year 1991-1992.

Graduating high school students with enrollment or plans for enrollment into a full-time course of study at an accredited college or university starting in the 1991-1992 school year are encouraged to apply for the scholarship.

Applicants must be recommended by a Mid Carmel Valley Fire Department member. Information and applications can be obtained by stopping by or calling the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Department, 8455 Carmel Valley Road, Mid Carmel Valley, 624-5907.

The scholarship fund was established in memory of Jim Barrett, who served as fire chief for Mid Carmel Valley until his tragic death in March of 1986. He was the former fire chief of Turlock Rural Fire District where his wife and family still live. Through the generosity of his wife Sharon, and friends from both Turlock and the Mid Carmel Valley areas, the dual scholarship fund was established to recognize and provide aid to high school students from both areas.

Applications should be turned in to the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Station, 8455 Carmel Valley Road, Carmel, CA 93923 and the deadline to receive applications is May 15, 1991. Recipients of the scholarships will be determined by the Scholarship Fund Trustees, comprising of Sharon Barrett, Anne McGowan, director of the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Protection District and Jack Wilkey of Turlock.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

The Social Security Administration came up with a revolutionary idea in 1978: credit monthly benefit payments directly to a recipient's bank account instead of mailing a check to the home address. The idea caught on. Today, about half of all recipients choose the direct deposit, which is made electronically. It avoids delays in the mail, possible theft of checks from the mailbox, and trips to the bank to deposit the checks. In addition, some banks welcome the steady deposits by granting free or lower-cost checking accounts. Still, some people prefer checks by mail — they don't want to wait for the next bank statement to verify the deposit. But the idea has caught on beyond the world of Social Security — more than 100,000 companies now offer direct deposit for employee paychecks.

How well do older Americans understand the need for eating a nutritious diet regularly? A national survey of people 65 or older found that one out of five skips at least one meal a day, and 36 percent say they never give a thought to the subject of a proper diet.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Straight-shooters

From the April 7, 1983
Carmel Pine Cone

This week I made a historic decision, long-delayed. I decided to perform an almost liturgical function, that of "spring cleaning." It is an ideal exercise in penance for the preparation of the Passover and the Easter season. Not without tears I threw out boxes of magpie or pack-rate treasures. In a corner of my library I found a Spanish manuscript.

"There is a long-forgotten story that relates to Carmel's glory.

It has been hidden in my archives all these years

Tho the parchment is quite dusty

This trusty tale appears."

It is a report on the Mission San Carlos. It was signed by Padre Juan Amoros and dated Feb. 3, 1814. The padre said San Carlos was, "Llamada Vulgarmente Carmelo."

We translate "vulgarmente" as commonly — not vulgarly — known as Carmelo. Frey Juan goes on to say that the Mission had sent seven Indian tribes: Esalen, Egeac, Rumsen, Sanconemos, Guachirron, Sargents Ruc and Calenda Ruc. The first two tribes came from the interior and had the same language, but the other five had a totally distinct tongue and in their primitive state there was no love lost between them.

However, at the Mision, "They gave, lent and borrowed not as strangers, but as brothers." The Padre gave an example of their two languages on the same subject. One began with the word, "muxina" and the other, "egenoch."

The sentence he used said: "Men who are good bowmen are esteemed and well liked." Perhaps this is true today of Carmel Rotarians who are yeomen, straight-shooters, never miss the mark and pull the long-bow with skill.

At this Eastertide may Almighty God grant us the ability to go on hitting the bulls-eye. May we treat our fellow man with the same kindness as "los Puros Indios De Carmelo" of long ago.

County moves toward accord with state, feds on opening Carmel River

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman received assurances from two county department heads this week that a process to breach the Carmel River will be in place by month's end.

During Tuesday's hearing, Public Works Director Gerald Gromko and Water Resources Agency Director Bill Hurst said the situation is well in hand.

Last week the state Coastal Commission and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers filed separate violations against the county for operating without a permit when breaching the Carmel River.

On March 18, after four years of drought, the county bulldozed the mouth of the Carmel River to prevent flooding in Mission Fields.

Since that time, the county has met with state and federal officials to iron out any differences.

"I see it as a manageable job that we can undertake in the next couple of weeks," said Strasser Kauffman. "It assures them (state and federal officials) that there is a plan of action, when the river is opened everyone will know how it is done physically."

Gromko said he is optimistic that the meetings will rectify the touchy situation.

"It should allow us to be in compliance with both agencies," he said.

And while it had been reported that environmental studies for the permits could cost as much as $200,000, Strasser Kauffman said existing studies on the Carmel River will be utilized.

"This should not be a major financial undertaking," she said.

Supes to hear Monastery Beach parking plan April 9

A CONTROVERSIAL plan to pave a 75-car parking lot at Monastery Beach will be heard by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, April 9, in the supervisors chambers in Salinas.

The matter is being appealed to the board by the state Department of Parks & Recreation from a decision by the Monterey County Planning Commission.

The planning commission denied the state's application for a combined coastal development permit to allow two parking areas, access road, tree removal, grading and two bathroom facilities at the beach, located on Highway 1 just south of Carmel.

The proceedings will be a public hearing, with interested parties welcome to provide input.

Month-long 'Dreaming Art' celebration opens Saturday

DREAMING ART: Seeing the Unconscious," a survey of dream-inspired, visionary and surreal artwork, opens for a month-long exhibition on Saturday, April 6 at the Carl Cherry Foundation.

Enigmatic animal-like forms, explosive patterns and vibrant colors create an expressionistic circus of the imagination in the all-media exhibit presenting the work of 50 peninsula artists. The exhibit is the centerpiece of a month-long series of programs focusing on art forms evoked from the unconscious mind.

In addition to the exhibit, Dreaming Art will feature a poetry contest and reading, an evening of baroque music and two films on the life of C.G. Jung. On Thursday, April 25, harpsichordist Katie Clare Mazzeo will be presenting a benefit concert for the Cherry Foundation. Mazzeo will be performing music by 17th and 18th century composers, including works by Frescobaldi, Couperin and Scarlatti. Tickets are $20 and will include a wine and hors d'oeuvres reception beginning at 7 p.m.

Additionally Dreaming Art will present two films on the life of C.G. Jung: The World Within and Remembering Jung. The films will be screened on April 19th at 7:30 p.m. in the Monterey Ballroom of the Hyatt Regency Hotel, One Old Golf Course Road, Monterey. Tickets are $10 and reservations can be made by calling 624-7491 or 649-8809.

Artists in the exhibit were encouraged to appropriate images from the psyches, dreams, visions and intuition and adapt them to a medium of their choice. Previous exhibitions combined a diverse mixture of disparate images, colors, shapes and forms — all unified by what Carl Jung called the archetypal depths.

The poetry reading will take place at 2 p.m. Saturday, April 27 at the Cherry Foundation and will include a special reading by dramatist Rosamond Goodrich Zanides from the early verse of Cherry Foundation mentor Jeanne D'Orge. Poetry winners will be announced following the reading.

A reception for the artists will be held on April 6, from 2:30 to 4:30 at the Cherry Foundation, Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel. For more information, call 624-7491.

How to Eat Like a Child

Tres Arts Children's Theatre presents an encore staging of How to Eat Like a Child - And Other Lessons in Not Being a Grown-Up. The musical comedy features 33 children and one adult.

In How to Eat Like a Child writer Delia Ephron reveals and revisits the joys of those lost days with wit and wisdom. Ah, childhood - open the refrigerator, look inside, close the refrigerator, overfeed the goldfish, torture your sister, beg for a dog.

The musical is directed by Leslie Williams with musical direction by Nick Williams and choreography by Cassy Reed.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 5:30 p.m. Sundays through April 7 at the New Wharf Theatre, Monterey.

Tickets are $6 for children, $8 for seniors/military and $10 for adults. For reservations, call 649-3479 or 649-5561.

Facing the Music

California's First Theatre presents The Troupers of the Gold Coast in their 494th production, Facing the Music.

This show is a British farce and centers around a series of misunderstandings. Each complication compounds the confusion until, as in all melodramas, all is well in the end. Two Mr. Smiths (and their wives) plus several others are drawn into this fun (for the audience) situation until one of the Mr. Smith's must face the music. Following the play, the Troupers present their olio.

Facing the Music plays at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays until April 27. Admission is $7 for adults, $5.50 for seniors and teens and $4.50 for sub-teens. Reservations may be made Wednesday through Saturday after 1 p.m. (375-4916) or call Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561. The theater is at Scott and Pacific streets in Monterey.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

International developments

NEWSBREAK: Monterey Bay Blues Festival has obtained some great performers for the next fairgrounds edition (June 22-23). Announced as signed by spokesman Lee Durley: Dr. John, Charles Brown, Etta James, John Mayall, killer guitarist Robben Ford, Five Blind Boys from Alabama. More next time. Ticket and general info number: 394-2652.

DEVELOPMENTS take on a distinctly international slant today. Planetwide jazz radio's Lisa Richmond (Pacific Grove home base) accepted an official offer and will be the media voice of the Pori Jazz Festival in Finland this summer.

And the brilliant Brazilian guitarist Carlos Barbosa-Lima will play a local date very shortly.

Exciting stuff. One item at a time —

TRAINED AS an architect and environmental designer, Lisa discovered the music at Greenwich Village venues during her student years. She started doing the weekly hour called Jazz Continental for KRML Radio of Carmel. Sample tapes drew positive comments from pros on both coasts — and recommendations that she attempt syndication.

Since March of last year, the extremely bright lady's program has been picked up "by more than 100 stations all over the world." Format: interviews, scripted commentary, tracks that show how other countries have evolved jazz-wise. She and her engineer now produce segments at a San Francisco studio.

Lisa: "Several musicians who heard the show began lobbying Pori Festival officials and the appropriate decision-makers of that government. This July (7/13-21), I'll cover the event for Finnish media — and of course over my own show. The on-site reports will be in English. But I am working with Finnish language cassettes."

Her L'Jazz Productions comes from a firm philosophical locus. "Jazz really is the universal language," she says. "It's a cry for freedom. I take my time with choosing associates — the importance of getting good-hearted people involved in the music cannot be stated too strongly."

And: "My legal help did a thorough search. This's the only show of its kind — anywhere. Everything we ship out carries a copyright."

Lisa says the Pori Festival has a 26-year track record "under the guidance of a brilliant music director named Mr. Kangas." Any reader wishing posters and information packets may call her local number — 655-0516.

"Right now," she finishes, "my show draws from about 8,000 international albums. And new things arrive every day."

CARLOS BARBOSA-LIMA took on a teaching stint at Stanford University. His peninsula friend George Warren (novelist, critic, guitarist) got on the horn. So Barbosa-Lima will appear in the Hidden Valley Music Series a week from Friday night (4/12).

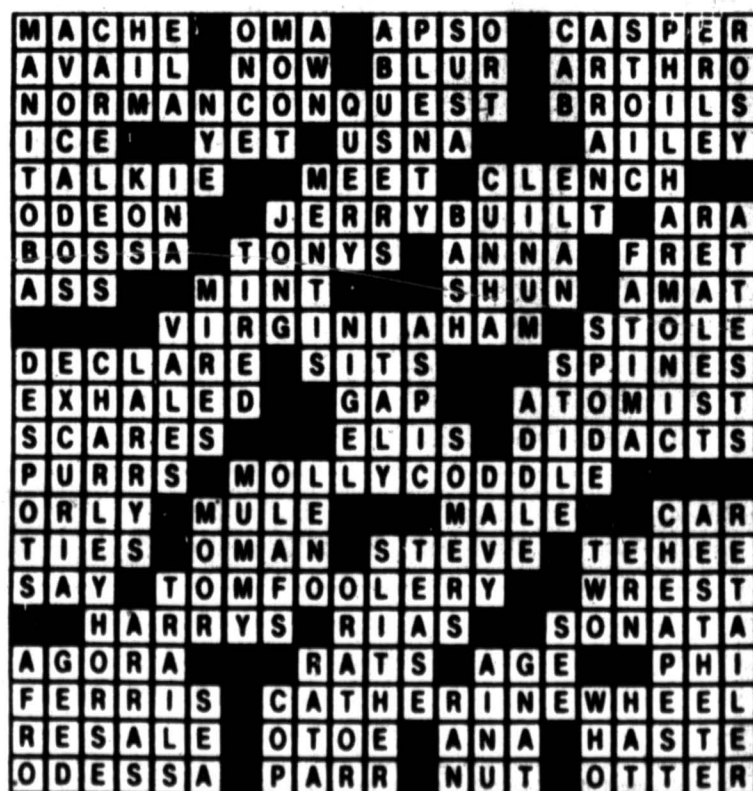

All this came out of series coordinator Richard Armbrust as we chatted before flutist Kenny Stahl's gig at Portofino Coffee House. The Hidden Valley door charge remains quite affordable at $10 per.

Barbosa-Lima recorded superb packages for Concord Records, playing the compositions of Jobim, Luiz Bonfá, Cole Porter, Alfredo Vianna, Ernesto Nazareth. A real poet, Jobim weighs his words respectfully. And he calls Carlos a brujo — Spanish for sorcerer.

The Hidden Valley star this Friday evening (4/5) — alto saxist Richie Cole. Shows out there start at eight o'clock; box office opens half an hour earlier.

OWNER KELLY Leonard of Doc Ricketts Lab reports "brisk ticket sales" on the spot's highly creative jazz series — saxist Carol Chaikin earlier this week, Fattburger (4/9 and $16 per), Wynton Marsalis fronting a nine-piece band (4/16 and $23), flutist Tim Weisberg (4/23 and $15).

"The public response has been positive," Kelly says, "so we've begun negotiations with (keyboardist) David Benoit for July and (reedman) Brandon Fields in May. Things look firm — go ahead and use those names."

ALTO MADNESS — That's what Richie Cole calls his band and performance style. He plays the Hidden Valley Music Series later this week.

Advance orders may be placed through Center Stage Ticketing. Leonard's pressing Wynton's PR people for IDs on the other players — significant since young Marsalis always works with top talent.

THE TIGHT Stahl unit delighted a goodly crowd at Portofino. Those men celebrated the new season via Clifford Brown's Joy Spring. They drew much applause when the title was the beautiful and little-heard Jaco Pastorius tune entitled Three Views of a Secret.

It was a revelation to hear John Donaldson on electric piano. He knows that the instrument's internal reaction time requires special patience. His work recalled the touch of world class Dutch keyboardist Rob Franken, who has recorded remarkably well with Toots Thielemans.

When will percussionist Macucho Bonilla front his own group? This fellow simply lights up whatever bandstand corner he occupies. The energy flow between Macucho and trap drummer Steve Robertson was no less than riveting.

Announced bassist Terry Miller couldn't make the gig. Steve Burstin's acoustic grooves were more than adequate. He's out of the tough D.C. scene — I'd like to hear him take on hard bop charts behind a pianist of Donaldson's sensitivity.

Don't forget the Sunday evening jams at Portofino. These have become extremely popular with listeners and players like flutist Ali Ryerson, Brian Stock (flugelhorn), Weber Drummond (piano). Anchor man: guitarist Joe Lucido.

Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz spotlights the Poncho Sanchez Band on Monday night (4/18). Eight o'clock kick; $13 per; Center Stage Ticketing.

Shanty Malone's still features hot trumpet man Ron Coolidge (Tuesday evenings). New touch — music for dancing at various times.

NEXT WEEK — high-level San Francisco slate known as Jazz in the City Masters Series. Diz, Dorothy Donegan, many other heavyweights. Full orchestral reading of the Mingus Epitaph.

WIDE OUTREACH — Radio personality Lisa Richmond of Pacific Grove will serve as official voice of European jazz festival. See Detro column for details.

MUSIC CORNER

By Mildred Kline

Chamber Music Society honors young musicians

THE CHAMBER Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula concluded its 20th annual chamber music competition last Sunday by awarding $8,000 in prizes divided among four groups of very talented young future professional musicians.

The W. Frederick Schaad Award of $1,250 was presented to the Caurus Sextet (woodwinds and piano) from the University of British Columbia, Vancouver, consisting of Raymond Aucoin, flute; Elizabeth Sillet, oboe; Stephen Robb, clarinet; Allan Thorpe, bassoon; Ken MacDonald, horn, and Stephen Smith, piano.

The Caurus Sextet gave a lively performance of the Poulenc Sextet. This technically demanding music gave each instrument an opportunity to carry the theme in the vivacious first movement, "Tres vite et emporte." It also showed the fine rapport among the players. The brilliant piano playing of Smith was outstanding. The introspective melody of the Andantino and the whimsical, old circus tune were expressively played. The group captured the change of mood and dynamics in the rhythmic presto finale.

The Florence Allan Award of $1,750 was presented to the Ahn Trio from Juilliard. This trio of beautiful sisters, Lucia Ahn, piano; Angella Ahn, violin, and Maria Ahn, cello, has been performing together for more than 11 years. They are very skillful and cohesive. They played Movement I and II from the Piano Trio by Leon Kirchner. I found the extraneous body movements of the cellist very distracting. These motions prevented her from focusing in on getting the best level of quality from her instrument.

In memory of Angie Machado, the co-founder of the Chamber Music Society and founder of the competition, a $2,500 award was presented to the Cantilena Wind Quintet from the Miami University of Ohio. The quintet is made up of Kimmerle Metz, flute; Krista Pfennig, oboe; Robert Lancaster, clarinet; Vanessa Kulisek, bassoon, and Allison Bennett, horn.

The quintet performed the Six Baguettes by Gyorgy Ligeti. The opening Allegro con Spirito, with its staccato tune, quickly demonstrated the skill of the players in the contrapuntal romp. The oboe melody, prominent in the Lamentoso Allegro Gracioso and sounding like a shepherd's song, was charming.

The lively dance of the Presto Ruvido contrasted with the Adagio melody over the pedal point. The syncopated rhythms and jazz influence made a very effective tuneful finish. This quintet played with excellent technical control, good style and fine musicianship.

The first place winners were the last to perform. They were the Myriad Quartet which received the Monterey County Cultural Award of $2,500. It was a pleasure to hear these young accomplished musicians representing three different schools of music: Cecily Ward and Tom Stone, violins, from the Cleveland School of Music; Paul Wakabayashi, viola, from the Manhattan School of Music; and Amos Yang, cello, from Juilliard. Cecily Ward, at 18, is a brilliant young violinist.

This quartet made a profound impression on the audience, playing the Beethoven Quartet in E Flat Major, Op. 74 (Harp). The young musicians play with deep understanding of the music, excellent dynamics, and sensitive and cohesive ensemble.

The Myriad Quartet performed the difficult music skillfully and managed to create a unique sound with a facility that escapes many established groups. They captured the soul of the music. It would be a pleasure to hear them in a full concert.

It was a joy to hear these young, talented musicians. Congratulations to the Chamber Music Society for affording us the opportunity to hear them and for sponsoring such a wonderful competition.

Art museum offers tours

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art offers docent-led tours for the public at 2 p.m. on the first Sunday and third Thursday of each month.

At present the 45-minute tours focus on selections from the museum's permanent collection. Among the works currently on view are California historical paintings, William Ritschel seascapes, bronzes and paintings by Charles Russell and Frederic Remington, and prints from the "Jazz" series by Matisse.

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art is at 559 Pacific St. (across from Colton Hall) in Monterey. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, and 1 to 4 p.m. weekends.

Carmel Heritage seeks film footage

Carmel Heritage is seeking film footage (amateur or professional) and photographs of important or memorable events and people through the years in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

"We will be most grateful to those who can furnish photographs, memorabilia or film (in any format)," said Roger Newell, president of Carmel Heritage. "We're particularly interested in items from the first 50 years of the century — the older the better!"

Those who can help are urged to call Carmel Heritage board member Kay Prine at 625-5715 or 624-5863.

Pick-up of all items can be arranged, and items will be returned to their owners.

Gather mushrooms while ye may

The California Department of Parks and Recreation — Big Sur — has designated the east portion of Andrew Molera State Park open to mushroom gathering. Each visitor will be allowed to gather one pound or one mushroom per day.

Due to the complexity of mushroom identification and the many poisonous varieties, mushroom gathering should only be attempted by individuals knowledgeable and experienced in identification. Proper reference guides should be utilized.

Monterey movie memorabilia shown

"On Location: Monterey County," an exhibit highlighting movies made in Monterey County since the 1920s, can be viewed in the Monterey Airport mezzanine gallery.

Featuring colorful movie posters, production photos and local newspaper articles, the show depicts some of the more than 144 motion pictures that have given big screen exposure to the county. Among them are The Sandpiper, Play Misty for Me, Rebecca, East of Eden and Turner and Hooch.

The show is presented by the Art-at-the-Airport program in cooperation with the Monterey County Film Commission. It runs through May 28. Hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Foster care families needed

The Office of Community and Children's Services needs homes willing to share their families with children who need an alternative home — whether it be for six months or the whole year — while family reunification services are offered, or eventually a permanent home.

Almost every currently licensed foster home is filled, the office reports. For information about fostering or adopting a child, call 899-8061 or 755-4660.
